

Dear Huaren,

Now that Copenhagen has fizzled out in a welter of recriminations and scapegoating (of guess who?!) I thought you might like to know that there's been a bit of a fight here in Britain.

I'm horrified by the sinophobia in the UK media:

<http://madammiaow.blogspot.com/2009/12/is-new-independent-newspaper-regime.html>

Tried to put a balanced case when I appeared on BBC TV and on my blog:

<http://madammiaow.blogspot.com/2009/12/copenhagen-summit-final-day-anna-chen.html>

<http://madammiaow.blogspot.com/2009/12/madam-miaow-on-bbc-world-service-tv.html>

<http://madammiaow.blogspot.com/2009/12/monday-sees-start-of-copenhagen-climate.html>

China has made many mistakes and no-one should complain about fair criticism. But recent media coverage ignores the positive changes China is making regarding climate change. It's not perfect but compared with the West it is heading in the right direction.

Seasons greetings from snowy cold London,

Anna Chen

<http://madammiaow.blogspot.com>